In Massively Open Online Courses (MOOCs) TA resources are limited. In order to deal with this, MOOCs use peer assessments to grade assignments and then use TA resource to check over some of these assignments. We present a model that models the challenge involved in allocating the limited TA resource. We discuss what makes this problem difficult, and then we present an algorithm that computes an approximate solution.