Graph decompositions are widely used algorithmic routines. They partition the graph to enable divide-and-conquer algorithms. In this talk we present a parallel and distributed algorithm for one particular graph decomposition, and apply it to the problem of constructing graph spanners.