This artifact shows that the higher in social ranking a person is, the more elaborate funeral procession they have.

This artifact is made out of a block of wood that from a tree that is so large that it could only have been found in Peru's desert coast, displaying that this society had to trade with other civilizations.

This artifact shows that sea creatures were important in their mythology which tells us that they had some form of religion in their society.

This artifact shows the different clothing and styles worn throughout this society. The man is wearing earrings and a cap and also clothes made out of textiles.

This artifact shows expresses different ideals and this was the writing of its time.

This artifact was found at a burial site, and there were many of these artifacts. This disk is very intricate in design, and was possibly used for decoration. The people who made this were advanced in their art skills, specifically metal working.